

With over 3,800 civilian women, children and men killed in the year 2018, Afghanistan has hit yet another “deeply disturbing and wholly unacceptable” record, according to a new report issued on Sunday by the UN political mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA) and the UN human rights office (OHCHR).

Fighting and brutal violence claimed 3,804 civilian lives in the year 2018 - including 927 children, another tragic record for the year - according to data carefully collected by the UN mission in Afghanistan. The number represents an increase of 11 percent compared to the year 2017.

In addition, 7,189 people were injured in 2018, 5 percent more than in the previous year 2017.

Overall, close to two-thirds of the civilian casualties were caused by armed terrorist groups, including the Taliban, Islamic State and other undetermined groups. However, the report says civilians were also collateral victims of pro-Government forces responsible for close to one quarter of all civilian casualties.

According to the report, the increase is largely due to a spike in suicide attacks by terror groups, as well as increased harm to civilians from aerial and search operations by pro-Government forces.

“The report’s rigorously researched findings show that the level of harm and suffering inflicted on civilians in Afghanistan is deeply disturbing and wholly unacceptable,” said Tadamichi Yamamoto, the United Nations’s Special Representative for Afghanistan.

“All parties need to take immediate and additional concrete steps to stop a further escalation in the number of civilians harmed and lives destroyed.”

Tadamichi Yamamoto, the United Nations’s Special Representative for Afghanistan

The report is the UN’s 10th annual report documenting the plight of civilians in the Afghan conflict: in a decade, more than 32,000 civilians have been killed and around 60,000 have been injured.

The conflict, which has now gone on for a total of four decades, is claiming thousands of more lives every year.

“It is time to put an end to this human misery and tragedy. The best way to halt the killings and maiming of innocent civilians is to stop the fighting. That is why there is all the more need now to use all our efforts to bring about peace. I urge all parties to seize every opportunity to do so,” stated Mr Yamamoto, who also heads UNAMA.

Election-related violence was particularly deadly for civilians in 2018, including on 20 October - polling day - when UNAMA recorded the highest number of civilian casualties in any single day for the whole year.

UNAMA report Number of civilian casualties in Afghanistan, 2009-2018.

“The conflict in Afghanistan continues to kill far too many civilians and has caused long-lasting suffering, both physical and psychological, to countless others,” said the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Michelle Bachelet.

“The fact that the number of children killed this year is the highest on record, is particularly shocking. In addition to the lives lost, the dire security situation is preventing many Afghans from enjoying their economic, social and cultural rights, with thousands of children already handicapped for life because of attacks on schools and medical facilities,” she added, calling on all parties to the conflict to fully respect international humanitarian and international human rights law to protect the lives of all civilians.

UNAMA reports Children killed and injured in Afghanistan, 2009-2018

CERTIFICATE COURSE IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

SIX-WEEK ONLINE COURSE IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS BY THE KOOTNEETI

JOIN TODAY!

team@thekootneeti.com
courses.thekootneeti.in (+91) 120 4565994

The views and opinions expressed in this article are those of the author and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Kootneeti Team

Facebook Comments